Monster's Lunch

by Janice Marriott

illustrated by Scott Pearson

Monster started at our school.
We showed him where to put his bag.
We showed him how to sit on the mat.

We looked after him at lunchtime.

“What have you got for lunch?”
we asked.

“Something munchy?
Something crunchy?”

Monster looked in his lunch box.

“Yum!” said Monster. “I’ve got worms for lunch today.”

“Worms!” we cried.

“Worms for lunch?

Worms aren’t munchy!

Worms aren’t crunchy!”

“But I like worms,” said Monster, and he ate them all up.

“What else have you got for lunch?” we asked.

“Something munchy?
Something crunchy?”

Monster looked in his lunch box.

“Snails!” he said. “I love snails.
Snails are munchy.
Snails are crunchy.
Here – have one,” he said.

“Snails? No thanks,” we said.

Monster looked at us.

“Well, what have you got for lunch?
Something munchy?
Something crunchy?” he asked.

We looked in our lunch boxes.

We had carrots. Yum!

We had apples. Yum!

“These are munchy!

These are crunchy!” we said.

“Try these.”

“No thanks,” said Monster.

Monster ate his snails.

We ate our apples and carrots.

Munch, munch, crunch, crunch.

Yum! Hooray for lunch!

This book is for students to read and enjoy after they have become very familiar with the big book during many shared reading sessions.
